Keynote speech: What's Next? Making Sense of a Global Economy

In this big picture presentation, Zanny Minton Beddoes—The Economist's Editor-in-Chief and former Washington Editor, Economics Editor and Business Affairs Editor—reveals the interplay of democracy, demography, technology, energy and government policies as the ultimate drivers of economic change.

As it relates to global economy: 1) How is Europe displaying attributes typical of Japan, where economies are no longer shrinking, but stagnant? 2) Emerging market economies are being tested: A candid look at which have promise and those that could collapse under the pressure.

Minton Beddoes delivers unmatched insights and global perspective on the various economic elements at work in presentations that are constantly evolving along with global economic conditions and circumstances.
